

ECCK CFO Forum: Lessons for CFOs resulting from recent cases of fraud in Korea

EVENT OUTLINE

In recent months there have been several high profile cases in Korea relating to employees embezzling cash from companies. This has put a spotlight on the controls that companies have in place to mitigate risks associated with fraud, particularly with regard to cash held in bank accounts.

During this session participants will be provided with:

- an understanding of how embezzlements have been carried out by employees
- the types of controls that companies need to focus on, particularly with regard to some that are often overlooked
- an introduction to some automated tools that can help form part of a company's financial controls over cash balances
